“If you do what you love, you will do it well and it won’t matter what others think.”

Everyone has a dream of what and who they want to be when they grow up. For many trans, nonbinary and gender-diverse young people, dreaming big can bring challenges, mostly because they don’t have the opportunity to see people like them at work.

For Trans Awareness Week our ‘#TransatWork’ campaign is seeking to celebrate and showcase the many talented trans, nonbinary and gender-diverse people who are doing what they do best.

This blog is here to show everyone that gender does not limit what you can achieve. Whether you dream of going to space, working on cutting edge gaming software or touring the world as a musician, trans, nonbinary and gender-diverse people succeed in every kind of job you can imagine, and come from all sorts of backgrounds. Reminding us all that who you are doesn’t stop you from achieving your dream.

Sail is a support organisation developed by families to support families across Northern Ireland. We offer a safe and confidential space to talk. Contact us by email, telephone or through Facebook and we can offer one to one or group peer support, links into established family networks, opportunities to engage with other parents / individuals and information and support on accessing services. We are always happy to chat, whether your query is personal or professional, training or support. Please don't hesitate to get in touch.

Sometimes trans people need support, sometimes families need support too.

We know that there are times people need support to talk about gender. We know because there was a time we needed that support. Sail connects families and together we support each other. We can help.

"...before I found Sail I thought I was alone. Meeting other mums and hearing them talk about their kids, knowing there were other families out there and I wasn't alone meant the world to me..."
Jennifer Sail Mum

If you are a parent, grand parent, carer, sibling or friend or anyone who needs to talk about gender please give us a call. We are here to help so that you know you are definitely not alone
