

General Patient Information – Ultrasound scan of abdomen/pelvis

Your child has been referred for an ultrasound of abdomen/pelvis by your doctor. This leaflet explains what the examination involves and what to expect when you come to the hospital. It may not answer all your questions, so if you have any queries or concerns, please contact RBHSC US Department.

It is important that you read this leaflet carefully, even if your child has had this procedure before.

YOU MUST CONTACT THE DEPARTMENT ON 02896150293 to CONFIRM this appointment.

A site map has been included.

PLEASE allow time for parking as traffic builds up in the Royal hospitals site especially prior to clinics. This is imperative as those who arrive late may not be seen.

If an interpreter is needed, please phone the X-ray department before the appointment.

What is an Ultrasound?

This is an examination using sound waves to take images of the inside of your child's body (the same sort of examination that is used to scan pregnant women). These images will help doctors diagnose and treat medical and surgical conditions. A radiographer will perform the scan.

What are the benefits of having an ultrasound exam?

Ultrasound captures images of the organs and tissue that don't show up well on x-rays. Your child is not exposed to ionising radiation, so ultrasound is safer than x-rays and CT.

What are the risks?

There are no known harmful risks with ultrasound. To reduce the risk of infection by non-sterile ultrasound gel products, remove all residual gel from your skin after the procedure, and wash area when able to do so.

Is there an alternative to this examination?

Your referrer has decided that your child requires an ultrasound scan. This examination will help your referrer to assess your child more fully and plan any further treatment that might be necessary. If you would like more information about alternative imaging modalities, please speak to the doctor or health care professional managing your care.

How to prepare your child for the procedure

IMPORTANT INFORMATION - Before you come to the department.

It is necessary for your child to fast for this examination and have nothing to eat for 4 hours before the examination.

Your child also needs a full bladder. If toilet trained, please try to ensure that your child does not go to the toilet for 1-2 hours before the examination and encourage drinking water or non-fizzy juice (several cups) in the hour before the test.

Asking for your consent

The sonographer/radiologist will ask you if you are happy for the scan to go ahead. This is called verbal consent. If you do not wish your child to have the scan or are undecided, please tell the sonographer/radiologist.

Students/trainees may be present during the examination but only with your verbal consent.

Please remember that you can ask the sonographer/radiologist any questions you have at any time before, during or after your scan.

Will your child feel any pain?

Ultrasound is a safe and normally painless procedure but if your child is tender to touch, they may experience a little discomfort.

What happens during the ultrasound exam?

Your child will lie on a couch in the scanning room. The sonographer or radiologist will use gel and a small “camera” to take images of the inside of your child’s body. The camera will be moved over the area being imaged. Additional images may be taken with your child in a different position or holding their breath.

These images will help doctors diagnose and treat medical conditions. The scan will be performed by a sonographer or a radiologist. As well as the person performing the scan there may also be a trainee sonographer, trainee radiologist and/or consultant radiologist present who will be clinically responsible.

The examination normally takes 20 – 30 minutes. We aim to take your child on time but if emergencies come in there can be a delay. If so, we will keep you informed of the estimated delay time.

What happens after your child's ultrasound exam?

Once the examination is complete the sonographer will not be able to tell you the results of the scan. The scan will be reported by a radiologist and the report will be sent to your referring doctor.

No special aftercare is required and your child can return to normal activities afterwards.

When will I get the ultrasound exam results?

Results are normally given by the clinician who has referred your child for this examination at a follow up clinic appointment or by letter.

Image sharing

Your images will be electronically stored on the hospital picture archiving system. This data can be accessed throughout the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust and other doctors and health care professionals who are directly involved in your care. The ability to share images and radiological reports will improve the safety and quality of your care by ensuring that the right information is available in the right place at the right time.

In order to improve the medical services we provide we may also use your data as anonymously as possible for internal audit and medical education. If you would prefer that your data is not used for these purposes, please inform a member of staff when you attend for your examination.

If your data is to be used for research, then a separate consent process will be used. You will be asked for your consent, should this be the case.
