US TRANSABDOMINAL & TRANSVAGINAL PELVIS SCAN

A guide to Ultrasound scan of the Transabdominal & Transvaginal Pelvis

This information leaflet will explain what a Transabdominal & Transvaginal Pelvis scan is and why you have been sent for one. Please read this leaflet carefully. If you have any questions or concerns not answered by this leaflet, please contact the Ultrasound Imaging Department.

What is an ultrasound Transabdominal & Transvaginal Pelvis scan?

An ultrasound examination obtains a picture of the inside of the body without the use of x-rays. It involves high frequency sound waves passing through the body and being reflected as echoes from structures inside the body. These echoes are displayed as images on a screen from which a diagnosis can be made.

The transabdominal and transvaginal scan involves two parts

Who carries out the imaging?

The ultrasound scan is carried out by a sonographer.

What are the benefits of having an ultrasound exam?

Ultrasound captures images of the organs and tissue that do not show up well on x-rays. You are not exposed to ionising radiation, so ultrasound is safer than x-rays and CT.

What are the risks?

There are no known harmful risks with ultrasound. To reduce the risk of infection by non-sterile ultrasound gel products, remove all residual gel from your skin after the procedure, and wash area when able to do so.

Are there any alternatives?

Your referrer has decided that an ultrasound scan would be the most useful in your case. The examination will help your referrer to assess you more fully and plan any further treatment that might be necessary. If you would like more information about alternative imaging tests, please speak to the doctor or health care professional managing your care.

Medication

Please continue to take any prescribed medication as normal. This will not affect your scan.

Asking for your consent

The sonographer will ask you if you are happy for the scan to go ahead. This is called verbal consent. For transvaginal scans, you will also be required to provide written consent. If you do not wish to have the scan or are undecided, please tell the sonographer.

A chaperone will be present during your scan. Students/trainees may be present during the examination but only with your verbal consent.

Please remember that you can ask the sonographer any questions you have at any time before, during or after your scan.

Will I feel any pain?

Ultrasound is a safe and normally painless procedure but if you are tender to touch you may experience a little discomfort. The Sonographer is happy to stop the scan at any time.

Is there any preparation required?

PLEASE DRINK ONE LITRE (2 PINTS) OF WATER AN HOUR BEFORE YOUR APPOINTMENT. DO NOT DRINK FIZZY DRINKS.

We need you to have a full bladder for the examination. Please refrain from going to the toilet before your scan.

Catheters: If you use these please bring one with you to your appointment.

PATIENTS ARE ASKED TO ATTEND 10 MINUTES BEFORE THE APPOINTMENT TIME TO ENSURE PREPARATION IS COMPLETE

What happens during the transabdominal pelvis scan?

- It is not necessary to undress for the transabdominal examination, but you will need to move clothing from your lower abdomen
- You will be asked to lie down on the ultrasound couch
- Some gel will be applied to your lower abdomen
- A small probe will be placed in contact with the gel and moved over your lower abdomen
- The scan gives a general overview of the pelvic organs
- The number of staff will be kept to a minimum during your scan
- The examination should take approximately 20 minutes to complete
- To enable us to clearly visualise the pelvic organs, we ask that you follow this preparation

The second part is the transvaginal scan

This is the internal scan; the probe is a lot closer to the pelvic organs providing us with much more information and much clearer images.

You will be sent to the toilet to empty your bladder completely before having the transvaginal scan.

If you have never been sexually active or had an internal examination/smear test before, we can still perform a transvaginal scan at your request. However, please be aware that if you decide to proceed with the transvaginal examination the hymen will be broken. Please feel free to discuss any issues or queries with your Sonographer at the time of appointment or with your GP prior to attendance.

Please note if you had any of the following:

- Recent surgery of cervix
If you had a small part of your cervix removed (Large loop excision of transformation zone procedure) in the last 28 days please contact the centralised appointments office on 028 9615 8900. Your appointment will need to be rearranged.
- Biopsy of cervix
If you had a cervical biopsy (tissue removal) in the last 14 days please contact the centralised appointments office on 028 9615 8900. Your appointment will need to be rearranged unless bleeding has stopped.
- Pessaries inserted (vaginal prosthetic devices)
If you are attending for a vaginal ultrasound it would be ideal if pessaries could be removed prior to your appointment. This is important to allow for better scan images – please discuss with your GP or Gynaecology clinic if this could be removed. However, if the pessary cannot be removed the examination can still go ahead.

What happens during the transvaginal pelvis scan?

- It is necessary to undress for the transvaginal examination, you will be asked to remove your underwear in private and put on a gown
- You will be asked to enter the ultrasound room and lie down on the ultrasound couch
- Some gel will be applied to a small narrow ultrasound probe
- The small probe will be placed into your vagina and moved slowly from side to side to exam the pelvic organs internally
- The number of staff will be kept to a minimum during your scan
- The examination should take approximately 20 minutes to complete

What happens after your ultrasound exam?

Once the examination is complete you can go home, or if an inpatient, return to your ward. The scan will be reported by the sonographer and the report will be sent to your referring doctor or other professional who referred you for the scan.

When will I get the ultrasound exam results?

The results will be sent to the referrer. If the ultrasound was requested by your GP, please contact them within 7-10 days of your ultrasound exam, or if the ultrasound exam was requested as an outpatient by a medical professional within the hospital, they will contact you with a review appointment. If you are an inpatient, your results will be shared with the referring Doctor within 4-6 hours.

Image sharing

Your images will be electronically stored on the hospital picture archiving system. This data can be accessed throughout the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust and other doctors and health care professionals who are directly involved in your care. The ability to share images and radiological reports will improve the safety and quality of your care by ensuring that the right information is available in the right place at the right time.

In order to improve the medical services we provide we may also use your data as anonymously as possible for internal audit and medical education. If you would prefer that your data is not used for these purposes, please inform a member of staff when you attend for your examination.

If your data is to be used for research, then a separate consent process will be used. You will be asked for your consent, should this be the case.
