She has developed 'birth and beyond' peer WhatsApp support groups and when able has facilitated peer walking group support. Mairead was interviewed by the BBC for her work over the first lockdown and has also been the lead for 3 Surestarts in Belfast achieving UNICEF Baby Friendly Gold Status. Some comments of parents of the support over the past year: "Mairead really is amazing the support and care she gave to me I will never forget before and after having my son." "Mairead I loved having the WhatsApp group available to me at the start of my breastfeeding journey especially with him being born when lockdown was so hard. You have given amazing support and although my breastfeeding journey was short and sweet I loved having this group to rely on." "Hi Mairead just wanted to give you my opinion on the WhatsApp group. I enjoyed getting information through this method as you are able to look at different videos via youtube, able to send pictures and be able to send links and look back at them whenever you want to. Whereas normally if there wasn't covid it would probably be leaflets etc and I think this is a handier method. Even though you didn't get to meet the other girls and their babies it was nice to have other people to talk to and find out about their births and feel like you were part of a group. Thank you for your help." "this group has been a godsend as a first time mummy. Even some questions I've asked I've felt sounded stupid lol but everyone has been amazing!!! Hopefully we can have a proper meet up when this is all over. Mairead and Martina have been amazing with different things I've needed over the past few months."

Ward B nurses were involved in intubation of 34 patients in one month - a skill they had never needed before. For each of these patients the nurse was by their side as they faced a terrifying and uncertain future.
