Information for Patients

BHSCT Rheumatology Advice Line Information for Patients

- When to call the Rheumatology Advice Line
- When not to call
- How it works.

We offer a telephone advice service for patients and their relatives only

Monday - Friday 9am – 12.00noon

The service is not available at weekends or Public Holidays.

The advice line is NOT an emergency line. It is operated by an answering machine; please do not leave any calls that require urgent action.

Your call will be answered by a member of administration staff and directed to the appropriate person.

If you need urgent advice, or advice not related to your rheumatology condition, you should contact your GP, or attend your nearest Emergency Department.

The advice line is for access to clinical advice and support for patients who attend the Rheumatology clinics at

Royal Victoria Hospital
Belfast City Hospital
Musgrave Park Hospital

When to call the Rheumatology Advice Line

You should only call the Advice Line:

- If you have a 'flare-up' of your arthritis that has not improved using self-help measures for at least a week
- If you are experiencing side-effects which you feel may be caused by the medication prescribed for your arthritis
- If you have concerns relating to your condition or treatment which cannot wait until your next appointment
- To report progress only if the Rheumatologist or Rheumatology Specialist Nurse specifically asked you to do so.

When not to call

- To change an appointment please call Appointment Enquiries
- To obtain test results, unless specifically asked to do so at your last appointment
- To discuss anything not related to your rheumatological condition.
